WHAT TO KNOW ABOUT IRREGULAR BORDER CROSSINGS

MOST REFUGEE CLAIMANTS ENTER CANADA THROUGH OFFICIAL ENTRY POINTS

In January 2019, 80% of refugee claimants in Canada made their refugee claim at the airport, at an official border post or at an inland immigration office.

Source: IRCC, 2019 statistics

CROSSING THE BORDER AT AN UNOFFICIAL ENTRY POINT TO CLAIM ASYLUM IS NOT ILLEGAL

To enter Canada without prior authorization for the purpose of seeking asylum is not a crime under international and Canadian law.

Why? Because it is not always safe or even possible for a person running for his/her life to obtain proper travel documents to reach safety in another country.

REFUGEE CLAIMANTS CROSSING THE CANADIAN BORDER AT AN UNOFFICIAL ENTRY POINT ARE FLEEING VIOLENCE AND PERSECUTION

Among the refugee claimants who crossed the Canadian border irregularly and who had their case finalized by the Immigration and Refugee Board between Feb. 2017-Dec. 2018, more than half of them were recognized as refugees.

Source: IRB.

Those coming from countries at war or with serious human rights issues have a higher acceptance rate.

Source: IRB.
Refugee claimants who cross the Canadian border at an unofficial entry point are not taking the space of others.

Refugee claimants do not delay or take the spot of economic/family-class immigrants or refugees Canada brings from overseas as they are processed in entirely different programs and selected on different criteria.

Refugee claimants who cross the Canadian border at an unofficial entry point are not taking the space of others.

As for all refugee claims made in Canada, the Immigration and Refugee Board will assess whether their fear of persecution in their home country is well founded.

The merits of each claim is assessed on an individual basis based on the specific facts of the case, the claimant’s testimony and the evidence provided. If the claim is rejected and the person has exhausted all legal avenues, s/he will receive a removal order and be required to leave Canada.
ALL REFUGEE CLAIMANTS ENTERING CANADA GO THROUGH A RIGOROUS SCREENING

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) is stationed full time at Roxham Road near Lacolle border in Quebec, where 95% of irregular arrivals take place.

Refugee claimants crossing the Canadian border at an unofficial entry point present themselves without delay to the Canadian authorities so that they can make a refugee claim. They are checked upon arrival by both the RCMP and the Canadian Border Services Agency (CBSA) regarding potential security threats and public health hazards.

The Immigration and Refugee Protection Act excludes refugee claimants if they are found to be inadmissible on the basis of security, serious criminality, organized criminality or human rights violations.

Between February 2017 and December 2018, less than 0.5% of refugee claimants who had entered Canada at a non-official border crossing had a serious criminal background.

Refugee claimants are not dangerous persons but are, in fact, fleeing danger themselves.

---

CANADA IS NOT FACING A REFUGEE CRISIS

Actual refugee crises are taking place in countries that receive millions of refugees year after year, such as: Turkey, Pakistan, Uganda, Lebanon, Iran, Bangladesh, Sudan, and Ethiopia, which often have limited means to provide the basics to refugees and local communities hosting them.

Only a small number of refugees go to the richest countries, including Canada, which receives less than 0.3% of the world's refugee population. In 2018, refugee claimants only represented 0.15% of the total Canadian population.

85 per cent of the world's displaced people are in developing countries.
CANADA’S ASYLUM SYSTEM IS NOT BROKEN

Refugee claims continue to be well-managed and processed in an orderly manner, as appropriate mechanisms have been put in place to adapt to the increase of refugee claims in the last two years by the government (at the federal, provincial and municipal levels) and civil society.

Some examples:

- Simplified processing and improved reception conditions at the border to accommodate larger numbers of asylum seekers.
- Simplified and faster processing of work permits to minimize pressures on provincial social services.
- 50% increase in processing capacity of asylum claims at the Immigration and Refugee Board between April 2017-March 2018 compared to the previous fiscal year.
- Increased funding and services towards housing search assistance for asylum seekers.
- Collecting and donating food items, clothing and furniture to refugee claimants settling in their new homes by Canadian citizens from all walks of life.

REFUGEES SHOULD NOT BE BLAMED FOR HOUSING/SHELTER SHORTAGES

Temporary emergency shelters for refugee claimants in Montreal are currently running at less than half of their capacity.

As for city-run shelters in Toronto and Ottawa, they are facing capacity challenges. However, these issues existed well before the increase of refugee claimants in 2017.

For example, Toronto’s shelter system has been running at over 90% of its capacity for the last decade.
Refugees contribute to Canada’s growth, regardless of their mode of arrival. Their contributions far outweigh the financial costs of their initial integration.

- Refugee claimants obtain a work permit within 30 days of making their claim. They contribute to the Canadian economy by adding to its workforce, by paying taxes and spending money on goods, housing and transportation.

- They fill jobs that are often not sought out by Canadians and help reduce job shortages affecting many businesses, especially in communities outside main cities.

- Refugees contribute to the demographics of Canada, which has an aging population. They are 10 years younger on average than Canadian-born citizens.

- Refugees have the highest citizenship rate of all immigration categories (89%), which demonstrates their strong sense of belonging to this country.

Citizenship Take-up Rates of Refugees vs. Immigrant Classes